MOST CONSIDERATE.—The sea-serpent has made its appearance again, this time "to the crew and passengers of the ship Durham on her voyage to Coromandel, and when in Hauraki Gulf." This phenomenon is supposed to be entirely due to the waning excitement in the popular mind in regard to the Eastern Question. The serpent has considerately come forward at a critical moment in the interest of the newspapers.

A Whistling Buoy.

On Wednesday morning the Trinity House steam yacht Galatea left Ramsgate Harbour for the Goodwin, with a buoy on board of peculiar construction. It is one belonging to the Trinity House Corporation, with which they intend to experimentalize at the north-east Goodwin, so as to ascertain its capabilities in warning off sandbanks or dangerous coasts. This buoy, which is a new invention, comes from a French firm, being manufactured by M. J. Perrin, of Havre, and is called the "automatic whistling buoy." In shape the body of the buoy is similar to the ordinary conical one, except that about 3ft. from the extreme top it is made flat. On this are fastened two small tubes, through which the air goes into the interior, and between these a tremendous whistle is fixed. Around the whole is a handrail, and two steps are placed, so that the summit may be reached from a boat for painting, repairing, and other purposes. Besides there is a man-hole. From the bottom of the cone is a large iron tube, about 20ft. long and between 6ft. and 7ft. in circumference, is attached. When in use, more especially in a heavy sea, the wind, in going down the two small tubes in the top, is immediately forced out through the whistle by the perpetual bobbing up and down of the buoy. The noise, it is expected, will be so great that it will be heard for miles off from the place where it is moored, thus giving ample notice of the dangers that surround it.

Wind gentle evergreen, to form a shade,
Around the tomb where my poor cat is laid,
Sweet ivy wind thy boughs to entertwine
With blushing roses o'er this cat of mine.

LECTURE ON THE MOON.—That selenography is growing in popularity among the working classes was well exemplified by the attendance at the Concert Hall, Lord Nelson-street, last night, at a descriptive lecture on an imaginary journey across the moon, delivered by Mr. Joseph Symes. The photographs of the moon's surface, as shown by the limelight apparatus, under the superintendence of Mr. Wheeler, were very striking; and the craters, mountain chains, and those depressions called "seas," were depicted with a distinctness which left nothing to be desired. Probably however, the most interesting feature of the lecture was the attempt to illustrate a portion of the moon's surface from the point of view of a spectator standing on the satellite, and from that producing "phases of the earth" corresponding to those of the moon as viewed from this world. Such expressions of the phenomena as "new earth," "first quarter," "full earth," although they may have sounded strange to many, were evidently understood in their application to the subject of the lecture, which was a decided success.
